THE FIRST PORTRAIT OF
HIS EXCELLENCY
THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

The "S.M. HERALD" says:—"The first portraits of the first Governor-General of Australia have just been taken by Mr. Mark Blow, and are now being issued from the Crown Studios. His Excellency the Earl of Hopetoun granted sittings on Tuesday last, with the result that eight different poses in full official uniform were secured. The process adopted is that known as the Esmo. There is no want of life in the look, and the poses, both sitting and standing, are natural and easy. It will be noted that the details of the Governor-General's uniform have been accurately and clearly reproduced, and no difficulty will be found by the initiated in recognising the various orders and insignia worn. Especially will be noted the collar, badge, and star of a G.C.M.G., the badge and ribbon of a K.T. (the rare and distinguished Order of Knight of the Thistle), the grand badge of the Victorian Order, the Jubilee Medal, and the Diamond Jubilee Bar. No doubt these fine portraits from the Crown Studios will be treasured in many homes as historical memento of the foundation of the Commonwealth of Australia, with which the name of Hopetoun will be ever associated." The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"The portraits are true to life, and give an individuality which cannot be mistaken. The lighting is artistic and effective, and the posing reflects great credit on the artist. Mr. Blow is the first photographer to be favoured with a sitting by the Governor-General."

TWO LITTLE DRUMMER BOYS.
A convincing and absolute success. The characters in the new piece have a good deal of human nature about them, and they act their several parts in an unexaggerated and unmitated way that speaks volumes for the moderation of the author. Some capital scenes are staged, notably those depicting Scottless Fair by Night, the Old Home at Silverdale, the Boys' Barrack-room, &c. The stage effects were managed with praiseworthy completeness.—Vide Press.

Only Two More Nights.
TO-NIGHT and TO-MORROW.
It seems the fashion to laugh, and if you want to laugh and be thrilled you will find both the laugh and the thrill in this play, which earned a handsome fortune for its English proprietor, Mr. Fred Gould, and secured to make the name and fame of Nat C. Goodwin, the brilliant comedian, in America. The Sole Australasian Rights are the property of Mrs. Alfred Dampier, who purchased the drama from Mr. Henry Pettitt. The management find it necessary to state this latter fact, as so many unauthorised performances have been given in the colonies.
NOTE!—The Theatre will be CLOSED on WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and GOOD FRIDAY.
NEXT SATURDAY, RAFFER SATURDAY, and each evening until the following Saturday inclusive. Positively the last opportunity of witnessing this Great Play in Sydney for many a year.

THE UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

WON BY OXFORD.

BY TWO FEET.

A DINGDONG STRUGGLE.

LONDON, March 30, 7.5 a.m.

The betting on the Oxford-Cambridge eight-oar race, which takes place this morning, is 3 to 1 on Oxford.

11.5 a.m.

The Oxford and Cambridge eight-oar race was rowed this morning over the course from Putney to Mortlake. Oxford won.

3.25 p.m.

There was a strong gusty wind, with rain, when the race was rowed.

Cambridge won the toss for choice of positions, and chose the Surrey station.

The race was a magnificent struggle.

At the Crab Tree, a little over a mile from the start, the boats were level, and at Hammersmith Bridge, almost a mile and three-quarters, the crews were still on even terms. Then Cambridge began to draw away in the fearfully rough water which prevailed between Hammersmith Bridge and Chiswick Church, and at the church, a few yards over the 2½ miles, Cambridge led by a length.

That advantage was increased to a length and a half at Barnes Bridge, 3¼ miles, where comparatively smooth water was met with.

Oxford now spurted magnificently, and drew level with Cambridge at The Limes, almost 3¾ miles.

Cambridge gamely responded, and a dingdong struggle ensued throughout the remaining portion of the course, about half a mile.

Oxford drew slightly away and won by two feet.

The time was 22 minutes 31 seconds.

Both crews were greatly distressed at the finish.

COMMONWEALTH ELECTIONS.

PROGRESS OF THE SCRUTINY.

DIFFICULTIES IN COUNTING.

THE POSITIONS OF PARTIES.

FREETRADE VICTORY FOR NEW SOUTH WALES.

The work of compiling the returns of the voting on Friday is proceeding slowly, the chief difficulty, of course, arising out of the Senate papers. A list of 50 names on a slip of paper, of which 44 have to be erased, is not an easy task for the voter, but the difficulty is greatly increased for the scrutineers. It is known that the operation of making a correct list has been very slow, solely on account of the system of voting in operation under our law. In South Australia the voter is asked to place a cross opposite the name of the person for whom he intends to vote, and with a voting paper of the length of that on Friday the work of both voter and scrutineer would have been greatly simplified had such a system been in existence here. Mr. Critchett Walker, C.M.G., chief returning officer for the State, worked throughout Friday night with his staff, and also all Saturday until 6 o'clock in the evening without a break. They then suspended work until this morning. In South Australia the scrutiny commenced as soon as the polling booths were closed, and continued until midnight, when it was postponed until the morning. In Victoria it does not appear, from the particulars to hand, whether the scrutiny was continued during any part of yesterday or not, and the same may be said of Tasmania and Western Australia.

Taking the returns as far as they have come to hand it appears as if freetrade will score a decisive win in New South Wales. Five out of the six leading members of the candidates for the Senate are freetraders, the sixth is Mr. R. E. O'Connor, whose personality is known throughout Australia. He is the best known candidate in New South Wales, and was expected to be one of the successful ones. The other five are members of the freetrade "bunch." Mr. J. T. Walker leads with 73,000 votes, followed by Mr. Gould, Mr. Millen, Mr. O'Connor, Mr. Pulsford, and Colonel Neild, the sixth member for the freetrade "bunch." Mr. J. P. Gray, is seventh on the list, and will be seen to be about 1000 votes behind Colonel Neild. Save, therefore, for Mr. O'Connor's great personality, the freetrade bunch appears likely to have been accepted in its entirety—a thing that has not happened before in the history of New South Wales. Sir William Manning, the leading member of the protectionist selection, is 20,000 votes behind Mr. Gray. It is therefore allowable to claim a great freetrade victory in New South Wales. For the House of Representatives there are as yet only seven returns complete, but there are several others so far advanced in the scrutiny that the result cannot be altered. The seven completed returns are for the city and suburbs. Mr. D. Thomson, for North Sydney, cannot be beaten, neither can Mr. Cook for Parramatta. It is not, however, necessary to enumerate those districts where the further progress of the scrutiny cannot change the position of the two leading candidates. They have now all obtained such leads that it is stated that results cannot be altered, except in one case—New England—where Mr. Sawers and Mr. Lonsdale are very close to one another. The New South Wales figures show that there will be 15 freetraders, 10 protectionists, and one labour member in the House of Representatives. Victoria, as might have been expected, has voted solidly for protection. The returned members are four freetraders and 19 protectionists. Queensland returns one freetrader and four each of protectionists and labour men, according to one computation, and two freetraders, three protectionists, one labour protectionist, and one labour, according to another. South Australia, if the present state of returns can be accepted as a guide, has four freetraders and three protectionists. Tasmania returns four freetraders and one protectionist, according to one correspondent, or three freetraders and two protectionists from another count; and Western Australia sends four freetraders and one protectionist. The solitary exception to the freetrade majority is Sir John Forrest himself, who had not to fight for his seat.

Taking all the States the present state of the figures shows that there are to be 26 freetraders, 37 protectionists, and 12 labour members in the Lower House. The labour men are classified as four freetraders, three protectionists, and five whose fiscal views have not been declared. Not one of those coming forward as independent members have been returned. There are not quite half the members of the House freetraders.

Looking at the Senate, however, the aspect is altered. New South Wales, as already mentioned, sends five freetraders and one protectionist, Victoria two freetraders and four protectionists, South Australia three of each. In Tasmania our correspondent places the figures at four freetraders and one moderate protectionist, leaving the sixth man unaccounted for, but another authority gives three of each. Queensland, according to our correspondent, has the leading seven at present classified—four labour men, who will support Mr. Barton's tariff, two protectionists, and one undeclared. Another authority places the leading men of the Queensland Senate candidates as two each for freetrade, protection, and labour. Western Australia appears likely to send five freetraders and one protectionist.

THE FEDERAL PREMIER'S COMMENTS.

THE GOVERNMENT ABLE TO CARRY OUT ITS PROGRAMME.

FEDERAL MINISTERS LEAVE SHORTLY FOR MELBOURNE.

On being interviewed last night in regard to the progress results of the federal elections, Mr. Barton said he had practically nothing to add to his previous statement. The further polling had confirmed his belief that the Government would have a substantial working majority, and would be able to carry out its programme.

The statement which had been circulated that it was the intent n of the New South Wales members of the Federal Government to go to Melbourne during the ensuing week, Mr. Barton said, was incorrect. It was not proposed by him at present to leave here for that city until April 9 or 10, and he did not think any other members of the Ministry would leave here before those dates. Several Cabinet meetings would have to be held before the meeting of the Federal Parliament, and those would be most conveniently held in Melbourne after Easter. Mr. Barton added that the work which is being done at present in Melbourne by Mr. George Jenkins, C.M.G., the Clerk of the Victorian Parliaments, assisted by gentlemen from the other States, was mainly in preparation for a great reception which is to be given by the Federal Ministry on the night of the opening of the Commonwealth Parliament. Mr. Jenkins and his colleagues were co-operating to see that the invitations were sent to exactly the right people in each State, and that all the detail arrangements were made as perfect as possible.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. G. H. REID.

SATISFIED WITH THE GENERAL RESULTS.

MAJORITY OF FREETRADERS IN THE SENATE.

STRONG FREETRADE MANDATE FROM AUSTRALIA.

In view of the momentous issues involved in the election of the first Parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia, and the fact that general speaking throughout Australia the issue placed before the people was whether this continent should be encircled by a fiscal barrier, or whether communication should be free and unrestricted as is the freetrade sense, a representative of the "Herald" yesterday called upon Mr. G. H. Reid, M.L.A., the leader of the freetrade party, and asked him to analyse, as far as he could, the position laid here by Friday and Saturday's vote throughout Australia.

"First of all," remarked Mr. Reid, "I would like to deal with the elections in New South Wales. I am gratified beyond measure by the results of the vote in the mother colony. For many years the protectionists, including Mr. Barton, have never been tired of asserting that there was no freetrade majority in New South Wales. Every election the same dreary contest of opinion arose, and Sir William Lyne, Mr. E. W. O'Sullivan, and others went into elaborate calculations to show that in spite of our majority in the State Parliament the figures showed that a majority of the voters at the polls were protectionists. But now they have cast their principle upon the hazard of a die, and I imagine every intelligent and unimpassioned person will see that their hallucination has been destroyed by last Friday's vote.

"Let us begin with the Senate. That vote was valuable as enabling both parties to put their strength on a State basis. True, the returns are not yet complete, but it is abundantly clear that the freetrade bunch of candidates has received an enormous majority of votes as compared with the protectionist bunch. Mr. R. E. O'Connor stands on quite a different footing from that of the other five members of the protectionist bunch, because of the large amount of support he received from the freetraders in response to his ringing for their support. But take Mr. J. T. Walker, who has not been in Parliament before, and compare him with Mr. O'Connor, and you find Mr. Walker 7000 votes ahead of the well-known and distinguished man, Mr. R. E. O'Connor.

"Taking the bunches generally, and leaving Mr. R. E. O'Connor out of the matter, we find that the member of the protectionist bunch (Sir W. P. Manning) next highest on the poll is no less than 30,000 votes below the highest of the freetrade bunch. Mr. Kidd, the second highest of the protectionist bunch is 29,000 votes below Mr. Gould, the second highest of the freetrade bunch; while the third protectionist, Colonel Mackay, is 31,000 votes lower on the poll than Mr. Millen. The fourth protectionist, Colonel Waddell, is 30,000 votes under Mr. Pulsford, whilst Mr. Hammond, the fifth of the protectionist bunch, is 36,000 votes below the fifth member of the freetrade bunch. These latter are sure to be returned. It is clear that Mr. R. E. O'Connor would never have been returned at all as a protectionist, because we find that Mr. J. P. Gray, who was never in politics before, comes within 2000 of Mr. R. E. O'Connor, in a total of 110,000 votes. I think this is one of the most remarkable features of the election, and shows the splendid faithfulness of the freetrade electors to the cause. Mr. Gray has never been before the public at any previous time, except as an elector of Ashfield, where he took the chair at public meetings. I wish without any further delay to return my heartfelt thanks to the great and triumphant party of freetraders in this colony for the splendid loyalty it has displayed. If, out of the 73,000 voters for Mr. J. T. Walker, 2000 had not been amiable enough to vote for Mr. R. E. O'Connor, Mr. Gray, our sixth man, would have been elected."

"What is your opinion of the vote for the House of Representatives?"

"I think the freetrade party has every reason to be proud of the vote for the House of Representatives in the mother State, because it has proved the overwhelming preponderance of the freetrade vote. It has also proved that the freetraders were not false prophets when they asserted that New South Wales was a stronghold of the faith. This fact has been proved in spite of the prestige that is supposed to attach to federal Ministers, and the fact that all the halos were on the other side.

"As for the larger view, taking in the other States, we have done, considering all things, very well for a start, for this great fiscal battle is not to be decided in one engagement. In Victoria, for the last 10 or 12 years, there has practically been no freetraders, except one or two men like Mr. Murray Smith, and the freetrade doctrine has not even had a chance of advancing in the politics of Victoria. In the election on Friday in the State there was a desperate fight for vested interests. To show how the prevailing policy of Victoria had dried up the freetrade energy, it is only necessary to state that the Freetrade Association in Melbourne, though full of health and vigour, could not get more than five or six eligible freetrade candidates to enter the lists.

"Now that the question has assumed a new phase we can look forward in the wider sphere of political thought and clash of argument and experience to a great improvement in that State. The returns for Victoria are still very incomplete, but it looks as if we should get four out of the 23 seats in the House of Representatives. That is within one of our most favourable anticipations. At the same time, there are being returned under the Barton flag several men who, I believe, are anything but warm protectionists. I wish particularly to express my regret at the probable defeat of Mr. Max Hirsch at Echuca. On a poll of 6000 votes he is within 600 of Mr. M'Coll, who had all the prestige of long being a member of Parliament and twice a Minister of the Crown. The voting shows that the people on the Victorian border have been very much impressed with the evils of protection and the barriers to intercolonial freetrade raised by the Victorian people. Mr. T. R. Ashworth went out at the last moment in the electorate of Indi to meet Mr. I. A. Isaacs, the able Attorney-General of Victoria, and scored nearly 2000 in a poll under 6000. For a certainty the delegation to the House of Representatives from Victoria will be a very much milder one than might have been expected.

"The protectionist bunch for the Senate was not selected by the Victorian voters. For instance, Sir Frederick Sargood, who does not belong to the bunch, polled 15,000 more votes than three of the candidates in the protectionist bunch. The position of Sir Frederick Sargood on the poll, within 4000 of the top, is a significant proof that the old intense protectionist hatred in Victoria of importers is weakening, because Sir Frederick Sargood is one of the leading merchants and importers of Flinders-street. He is a thorough freetrader, although his views are somewhat modified by the interests of the Victorian position. With reference to Mr. Simon Fraser and Sir William Zeal, who relatively occupy the highest positions on the poll for the Senate, I feel delighted that two gentlemen of such enlightened and moderate fiscal views have topped the poll. It may be said that those two gentlemen belong to the protectionist bunch, but they were two certainties. The rabid protectionist element of Victoria, so far as the six successful men are concerned, is at the bottom and not at the top of the poll, leading one to the conclusion that thoroughgoing protectionists are beginning to beat a discount in Victoria. I am sorry that one of the fearless and most able freetraders of Victoria, Mr. Robert Reid, has not succeeded on this occasion in reaching the Senate.

"Taking the Senate vote for South Australia we find that at least three freetraders have been successful. They are Sir J. H. Symon, Sir R. C. Baker, and Mr. Charleston. The first two gentlemen will be a tower of strength as able debaters, and would grace any assembly of politicians. Mr. Playford is bracketed as a member of the Opposition and a freetrader. If that is a correct designation we will get four out of the six seats, but my impression is that Mr. Playford is a protectionist. Still, for all that, he may take his seat on the Opposition side of the chamber. There is not sufficient data to hand about the vote in South Australia for the House of Representatives to enable one to express an opinion as to what will be the composition of the delegation from that State.

"With regard to Western Australia, advices to hand state that it is quite certain we shall have a solid freetrade delegation from that State to the Senate. This is a very gratifying circumstance, for there is no doubt the element which has decided this result represents the most progressive Australian public opinion. Most of the men on the goldfields of Western Australia are emigrants from Victoria, and instead of standing by the fiscal creed that drove them out of Victoria they have evidently seen the folly of that creed, and become enthusiastic freetraders. This solid result is one of the triumphs of the election for the freetrade party, because it shows that the youngest State in the Commonwealth is going to stand shoulder to shoulder with the mother State.

"In Tasmania and Queensland the results of the polling are not clear enough to enable me to speak with any precision, but it is abundantly clear that we shall have an absolute majority of freetraders in the Senate. Considering the basis of the franchise, and the fact that each State constitutes an electorate, a freetrade Senate rings the deathknell of the protectionist policy in Australia."

"How do you arrive at that conclusion, Mr. Reid?"

"Because the Senate will be the recipients of a national trust, and it will be its duty to see that that national trust or policy is observed. This state of things is full of interest to the constitutional observer, and to all those who realise the radical difference between a nominee chamber and a chamber based upon a State franchise, and, therefore, capable of receiving a mandate from the people. Therefore I look upon the results of the elections, so far as the Senate is concerned, as making protection impossible.

"With reference to the House of Representatives, the position of affairs in Tasmania and Queensland, to say nothing of South Australia, is not sufficiently well defined to enable me to indulge in anything like an accurate forecast; but Sir William Lyne's prediction that the protectionists would have a majority looks rather silly. By the way, Sir William made another very inaccurate statement when he spoke of his own election as a certainty by a high majority. The enormous vote polled by the freetrade candidate (Mr. Goddard), an unknown and absolutely untried man, and a stranger to the electorate, is about the most emphatic vote of censure ever passed upon a successful candidate who had all the prestige attaching to the position of having been Premier of New South Wales and now Minister for Home Affairs in the Federal Government. I look upon Mr. Goddard's position on the poll as a great triumph for him and a great humiliation for Sir William Lyne—a well-deserved humiliation, especially in view of the part played in his election by the Minister for Works and the Minister for Mines."

"What is your opinion regarding Sir George Turner's estimate that the Ministry will have a majority of at least 10?"

"They may have an apparent majority of 8 or 10, but to my certain knowledge there are elements in that majority which must not be regarded as solid for the Ministry.

"With regard to Mr. Barton's statement describing the policy of the Opposition as that of 'bounce and brag,' I have one or two words to say. In the first place, if it was a policy of that sort it certainly had its effect upon Mr. Barton and his colleagues, because they got as near freetrade as they possibly could in order to get out of the rain. But in point of fact, or as is often the case, the term which he applies to us more accurately fit himself. Who could possibly have resorted to such tactics more than he did in making those mysterious allusions to alleged dangers to the Constitution? Was not the time unworthy of responsible public men? Was it not an attempt to bounce the freetraders into casting votes for protectionists under the false cry that the Constitution was in danger?"

"Do you think the Senate will be the arena for any personal contest between Sir William Lyne and myself? I emphatically believe that a great deal of the future of Australia depends. I was in hopes that Mr. Wise at the early part of the struggle would have held the same views, and even if he had felt the personal attitude of himself to Mr. Reid so peculiar that he could not with any comfort to himself join the Freetrade Association, still it was not necessary that he should throw himself absolutely into the enemy's camp. If he had announced his candidature for any constituency in which he had a reasonable prospect of obtaining the freetrade vote, even if he had refused to acknowledge Mr. Reid's leadership as far as he was personally concerned, I think the attitude of the Freetrade Association would have been a neutral one, and I myself would have strongly advocated non-interference with the election, even if we had not given him our direct support. This would have preserved Mr. Wise's independence, both as a politician and an individual, without in any way compromising him as a freetrader. If he had been a man whose views on this subject had previously been uncertain he might possibly have considered that the financial exigencies of the States gave an opening for modifying all his views, but when it is considered that he was the most brilliant mentor possible of the freetrade party, and one of the best trained economists of Australia, an absolute surrender to a modified form of protection without even attempting to fight for his principles in the election, which must have such far-reaching results, does seem to me, as an old political friend of his, one of the greatest blunders of his life. I have said all this because I regret intensely that a man of such brilliant parts is separated from the party at a time when we require all the debating power in the new Parliament that we can possibly bring to bear against an able and compact body of men advocating principles which have been in vogue in the five other colonies. It is not the time for any freetrader, especially of New South Wales, and especially a quondam leader, to weaken our party by his defection."

Referring to the selection of candidates and the action of the association in regard to Canobles Sir William, in reply to some questions, and speaking as a member of the Freetrade and Liberal Association, said: "Everything was done by the consent of a majority of the associations, and the difficulty that met our party was that Mr. Wise was an absolute advocate of the present Government, whereas the other candidate was an opponent of the present Government, and presumably would sit in opposition and vote against the Government if it came to a test of the strength of the two parties. It was also understood that not merely did each labour member have a free hand with regard to the fiscal question, but that in matters connected with the fiscal question the principle of caucus, so injurious to Parliamentary government in the States, would not be applied."

Speaking more generally of the elections Sir William M'Millan said: "I had put down the results originally as 14 freetraders and 12 protectionists, and I am surprised and delighted at the increase in the number of freetraders from my forecast. My reason for that was this: Although many of the seats in the country, from what I learned during the few trips I made, could have been secured if strong men came out earlier, unfortunately as far as freetraders were concerned, owing to the distance of the Federal Parliament, at any rate during the first few sessions and other causes, we found it very difficult to persuade the best class of men to offer themselves. And, indeed, some of them who have been victorious, such as Mr. Cook, only came forward after a great deal of pressure was brought to bear. If several of our candidates who have been defeated had been placed earlier in the field they would have had a much better chance; but when in the elections you try to win a seat from a man who is personally well known over a large district you require to have either sufficient time for canvassing or to secure a man of more than usual ability with good speaking powers. These were our difficulties, and, no doubt, if they could have been met earlier in the campaign we would have had even a much better result. I am inclined to think that when the actual result is tabulated—that is, the number of votes recorded—the strength of the freetrade party will come out much more distinctly than even the majority of the members returned seems to imply."

As to the results of the elections throughout the whole of the colonies Sir William M'Millan when questioned said: "I think there must be, without knowing the results to-day, a majority of 12 for the whole of Australia in favour of the protectionist party. That, of course, is a House of 75 is a fair working majority; but with a majority of freetraders in the Senate, if the Opposition in the House of Representatives is solid, there should be sufficient freetrade force in the Parliament as a whole to prevent any extreme protectionist tariff from being adopted. The whole result in the future will depend on the absolute solidity of the freetrade party. It is a serious question, of course, whether when 'P' is placed against a man's name in one of the other colonies he has the same uncompromising view of a revenue tariff which the sound freetraders in this State have. The danger is that the freetrade party itself may be split into sections, and this makes it all the more necessary that the moment the elections are finished a complete system of organisation in the Parliamentary party should take place, not merely as regards the members of the House of Representatives, but also as regards the Senate.

"Under these circumstances, where possibly before all the returns are completed the majority of the Government as arising out of the elections of New South Wales and Victoria may be reduced by the returns of the other colonies to about nine or ten, the position of the Senate becomes more and more vital to the interests of freetrade. No doubt, with a very considerable majority such as 12, 15, or 20 in the House of Representatives, it would require very strong reasons on the part of the Senate, no matter what its freetrade majority may be, to absolutely block a tariff. Still, with an overwhelming majority of freetraders in the Senate and a comparatively small minority in the House of Representatives, the constitutional powers of the Senate would render impossible any tariff being enacted which was not reasonably in keeping with the feelings of Australia as a whole."

MR. E. D. MILLEN ON THE RESULT.

TRIUMPH FOR THE TRADITIONAL POLICY.

EMPHATIC VERDICT IN FAVOUR OF COMMERCIAL FREEDOM.

Mr. E. D. Millen when seen yesterday expressed himself as follows:—"So far as New South Wales is concerned the result is a splendid triumph for the traditional policy of the State. Whenever the plain fiscal issue has been submitted to the electors of this colony they have always recorded an emphatic verdict in favour of commercial freedom, and they have done so unmistakably on this occasion. It is quite easy in the light of the voting figures to understand the anxiety of Mr. Barton and his friends to keep the fiscal issue in the background in this State. On a straight out appeal they were foredoomed to failure, hence their strenuous efforts to keep 'wretched fiscalism' out of sight. However, the electors have fully appreciated the position. Whatever the figures from the other States, and they are yet too indefinite to speak about, it is clear the electors of New South Wales have given their representatives an unmistakable mandate, and they will naturally expect them to strain every nerve to give effect to it. I speak more particularly with regard to the Senate, when I say that the representatives of this State cannot escape the obligation to use every power conveyed by the Constitution to prevent the imposition of a tariff doing violence to the principles that have been elected to defend. I have no shadow of doubt that New South Wales will expect this of them, and I am equally confident they will not disappoint the anticipation.

"It is quite possible," continued Mr. Millen, "that the strong protest made by New South Wales against a high tariff and the knowledge that that protest is to be upheld by a firm and powerful party in Parliament will have a distinct influence in causing the Government to moderate its tariff rather than face the uncertainty of a prolonged and strenuous conflict. But, speaking on the assumption that the House of Representatives will have a majority for a high tariff and the Senate a majority for a low tariff, it must certainly be the duty of the latter House to vote any objectionable tariff. The Senate has been given very real and definite powers, and being elective the electors will demand of its members that they exercise those powers in support of their principles and pledges. It seems quite probable that the first big fight in the federal arena will be one between the two Houses over the fiscal issue. In such a case a low tariff Senate must either veto the objectionable tariff or stand convicted of an act of political treachery too serious for contemplation.

"There are two or three other points about the election that arrest attention. In the first place, spite of the claims of many of the candidates, party loyalty and discipline were conspicuous on both sides. The voting for both bunches was remarkably even, if Mr. R. E. O'Connor be excepted, and that gentleman clearly owes his position on the poll to freetrade voters. Another matter, and one for general congratulation, is the extreme calmness which characterised the election, which was conducted throughout of the most orderly character witnessed for very many years. Everywhere candidates of all parties were accorded excellent hearings, and in the majority of instances country mayors and other representative citizens went to a good deal of trouble to assist candidates, without regard to party, to place their views before the electors.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. WISE.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

A REVIEW OF THE POSITION.

Mr. B. R. Wise, K.C., who was one of the unsuccessful candidates for the Canobles Electorate, had no hesitation in giving his views to a "Herald" reporter. When addressed he simply said: "Look here, a defeat is a defeat, and it seems to me that not much is to be gained by discussing its cause; but this much may be said, that I am sure that in this case it has not much real political significance. Mr. Brown was a local man and deservedly popular, and would, I am confident, have beaten any opponent, and been equally successful either against Mr. Reid or Mr. Barton. No doubt a certain number of electors—and they were chiefly in the towns—voted for him because they disliked me, but he drew his support principally from his local personal influence and would have received it whatever policy he had professed.

"Personally I am not cast down by my non-success, because I recognise that to be defeated in a good cause is more honourable than many victories. I think all fair-minded men will admit that had I chosen to go back as some other freetrade politicians did upon many clear and often expressed convictions for a seat I could easily, as they did, have secured a plausible pretext—I could have obtained a seat here Sydney. But I have always held that consistency and adherence to expressed opinions in times of danger are the first duty of a public man. I could never again have held up my head in public life if I had acted contrary to my whole course of conduct since Federation first became a political issue, and joined with others in declaring that 'freetrade and protection' was the issue in this election. Ever since Mr. Reid induced the convention at Melbourne to reverse its decision to require the Federal Government to take over the State debts, I saw that a high tariff was obligatory in order that the Federal Government might be in a position to meet the necessities of the States, and compensate them for giving up their right to levy indirect taxation. Consequently, I am wholly at a loss to understand how the necessary revenue can be raised except by customs duties which will average on all commodities, other than narcotics and stimulants, from 15 to 20 per cent; and since commodities upon which it will be worth while to place duties with the sole exception of cotton goods are now manufactured, wholly or in part, in some portion of the Commonwealth, these duties must be incidentally protective. Mr. Bruce Smith, Sir William M'Millan, and other freetraders have repeatedly declared similar sentiments in public, and no expression can be more emphatic against the idea that fiscalism could be an issue at the first election of the Commonwealth Parliament than those which were made by Mr. Bruce Smith in the columns of 'United Australia,' and by Sir William M'Millan when he spoke at Bathurst in company with Mr. Barton, Mr. O'Connor, and myself last November. Mr. Bruce Smith and Sir William M'Millan, during the last few weeks, have seen reason to endorse different opinions, and although it is probable that this change of attitude on their part has had the advantage of securing to Australia the benefit of their services as legislators in the first Parliament, still I regret that they had not the courage to be consistent, because I think that if they had stood firm Mr. Reid would never have been able to raise the discord which has placed the freetrade party in New South Wales in antagonism with the Liberal sentiment of Australia, and made freetrade to be the mere party cry of a discredited provincial faction."

"What then," asked our reporter, "do you think as to the prospects of freetrade?"

"I am afraid," Mr. Wise replied, "they are very poor. Mr. Barton offered a fair chance to freetraders when he proposed a compromise tariff. His policy was one upon which all federalists, whether protectionists or freetraders, could honourably unite. But Mr. Reid has refused these overtures, and forced a contest between the extreme freetraders and the extreme protectionists, to which the issue was never from the first in doubt; and now the protectionists have obtained from Mr. Reid the one justification which they required for using to the utmost every opening which the possibilities of the tariff offer to protective duties. If the protectionists of Australia have any gratitude at all they ought, in my opinion, to erect a monument to Mr. Reid for the services he has rendered to the protectionist cause."

"And, what, then, do you think will be the attitude of the freetrade party?"

"Well, Mr. Reid and Sir William M'Millan may make some good speeches, pointing out in general terms the merits of freetrade, but neither of them will be able to propound any practical suggestions for raising the necessary revenue under any system of freetrade. It is because I am convinced that the Commonwealth cannot get its revenue under freetrade that I refuse to be a party to what I regard as an act of political deception by raising the fiscal issue. I am confident that before very long it will be generally admitted that my attitude was right. I have had a similar experience once before when I was defeated in 1895, together with Sir Henry Parkes and Mr. Barton, because I refused to join in asserting that Upper House reform was the real issue of that general election. I said then that it was a mere bogus party cry, and I am confident that just as Mr. Reid made no serious effort to reform the Upper House, so now, he will make no serious effort in the shape of any definite and practicable proposal to apply the principles of freetrade to the Commonwealth tariff.

"None the less, the party cry has been of service, and has done the work it was intended to do. I am quite content to have acted with independence and consistency, and I believe that in the long run the public appreciate a public man who dares to speak out against a popular misapprehension."

DISAPPOINTED BUT NOT REGRETFUL.

ORANGE, Saturday.

Mr. Wise addressed a few words to his committee at a meeting at the Club Hotel prior to his leaving by the mail train on Friday, he having previously arranged to be in the city to-day on important business. He said that as a Convention delegate and one of the framers of the Constitution he had submitted himself to the elections as a matter of course, leaving it to any whether they wished his services in starting the Constitution. He accepted his defeat, if with disappointment, as a decision against the Clubs' policy of a high tariff, which was not in accordance with the principles he had enunciated. He was not a protectionist, and was not in favour of a high tariff. He was a freetrader, and had been bracketed as a member of the Opposition and a freetrader. If that is a correct designation we will get four out of the six seats, but my impression is that Mr. Playford is a protectionist. Still, for all that, he may take his seat on the Opposition side of the chamber. There is not sufficient data to hand about the vote in South Australia for the House of Representatives to enable one to express an opinion as to what will be the composition of the delegation from that State.

"With regard to Western Australia, advices to hand state that it is quite certain we shall have a solid freetrade delegation from that State to the Senate. This is a very gratifying circumstance, for there is no doubt the element which has decided this result represents the most progressive Australian public opinion. pointment, still without regret, for he was now relieved from any necessity to make heavy personal and professional sacrifices which success would have entailed. He had faced an opposition of unprecedented malignity and unscrupulousness, but he was sure that when the smoke of battle cleared away many of those opposed to him would marvel at their blindness and feel ashamed of the unworthy tactics used to divide and distract Australians on the first crisis in their national history. He thanked his many friends throughout the electorate for their strenuous and unstinted efforts on his behalf, and would always retain pleasant recollections of his visit to the Canobias, and be ready to assist in the advancement of its interests by every legitimate means.

INTERVIEW WITH SIR WILLIAM LYNE.

PLEASED WITH THE RESULTS.

A GOOD WORKING MAJORITY EXPECTED.

GRATIFYING TELEGRAM FROM QUEENSLAND.

Sir William Lyne returned to his home at North Sydney yesterday morning, after having spent considerable time contesting the seat for The Hume in the Federal House of Representatives. Seen during the afternoon by a representative of the "Herald" he expressed himself pleased with the result of the polling so far as it had gone. Sir William Lyne said, however, that he was not in a position to speak with any degree of certainty until he knew what the actual results of the polling were not only in New South Wales, but in the other States. It was evident that the Federal Government would have a good working majority from the information already to hand, which he anticipated would be increased as the returns from the other States were received. So far as the Queensland vote went, he said he had just received a telegram of a highly gratifying nature. It showed that the figures gave the Ministry a sweeping majority in regard to both Senate and House of Representatives. He looked upon the labour members returned in the northern colony as Government supporters, especially in connection with the coloured labour question. In Victoria the whole of the representatives to both Houses might be considered Ministerialists, and he was of opinion that in Tasmania a similar result would be obtained. So far as the election had gone in New South Wales the Government could reckon on some 10 or 11 supporters in the House of Representatives. Now the battle was over as far as this State was concerned, he wished to say that the statements made by freetraders in regard to the fiscal question were absolutely without foundation. It was an impossible to bring in a protective tariff as it was to introduce a freetrade one. The tariff of the Commonwealth must be one of compromise, and throughout the whole course of the campaign he had never varied that opinion, and in no single speech had he advocated any two-sided. The fiscal cry had been raised simply for party purposes."

Speaking in regard to his campaign in The Hume, Sir William Lyne said the fight he had just gone through had proved the most bitter battle he had ever engaged in. He had contested many vigorous elections; but in none of them had he ever had to contend against such tactics as were adopted in the contest just concluded. At Albury, the largest centre of the electorate, numerous false statements were circulated with a view to his defeat, which in a measure, aided by the fanaticism of the single-taxers in that end of the electorate, accounted for the majority polled there by his opponent, which he estimated at 328. He, however, did particularly well in the country portion of the electorate, which was nevertheless very apathetic. Had it not been so, and if a full vote had been given, he would have won the seat by 1200 or 1500. As it was, he had a majority of between 610 and 620 votes, and the poll was the heaviest ever recorded. He had remained in the electorate until the declaration of the poll by the returning officer on Saturday night, about half-past 8. He expressed himself as greatly surprised at the defeat of Mr. T. Rose for Werriwa, and of Mr. M'Gowen for South Sydney, but in respect to Mr. Wise he did not anticipate a win. Speaking on the success which had attended the selected freetraders for the Senate, Sir William thought it could be accounted for on account of the candidates being better known, many of whom had been prominently before the public for many years. When the whole of the returns were complete he had no doubt that the position of the Government would be greatly improved.

MR. BRUCE SMITH'S VIEWS.

A representative of the "Sydney Morning Herald" waited upon Mr. Bruce Smith on Saturday, with a view of asking him one or two questions in regard to the result of the election.

"As to the general result," Mr. Bruce Smith said, "the outcome, so far as it can be seen, is confirming a view which I have long entertained, namely, that the fiscal result of a general election of all Australia could not be judged by the fact the five colonies were following a protectionist policy, and only one that of freetrade. I had always considered this a slipshod calculation, for it left out of consideration the element of retaliation, which has been a most potent factor in the history of several Australian tariffs. The border districts of the colonies were, in my opinion, principally actuated by that spirit; and I always felt convinced that the abolition of the proposed abolition of intercolonial duties would not truly incline men's minds to freetrade, but by a process of what I would call logical momentum draw them into the further conviction in favour of international freetrade. I remember Dr. Quickburg, who represented South Australia in the 1890 Federal Convention, alleging that the colony he represented had become a protectionist community in a spirit of retaliation. The same thing referred to all the border districts of the group; and, remembering that the vote which came over to freetrade counted as two by deducting one from the protectionist majority, I have always considered it doubtful whether a Commonwealth verdict of the whole people would favour international protection. The result, so far as I can judge it, is a very close one. New South Wales has returned 15 freetraders, Queensland two, Victoria three, South Australia four. If Western Australia returns three (which is a low estimate) and Tasmania three, the Opposition will count 30 in the House of Representatives. If New South Wales and Queensland have returned between them six independents or labour members, who have not committed themselves to any fiscal faith. If these six are added to the Opposition 30, the Ministry are left with 36, or a majority of six irrespective of the independent or labour members. That may be a working majority in a House of 72, but the strong character of the Senate makes it necessary to look further in considering whether the Government can carry their policy if it be one of a high-tariff character. New South Wales has returned to the Senate five freetraders, Victoria one, South Australia four, and Western Australia and Tasmania may be counted as five and four respectively. If that be right the freetrade party would have 19 in the Senate out of 36, so that there are four independent candidates the Ministry can count on only 13. Now, assuming that the independent candidates will be equally divided, and that the freetrade majority in the Senate throw out the Ministerial measure, and a joint sitting be ultimately resorted to, the Government would have the 36 in the House of Representatives and 13 in the Senate, or 49 in all; the freetraders would have 39 in the House of Representatives and 19 in the Senate, or 49 in all; so that, again assuming that the independents are equally divided, the Government would not have a working majority. There are many circumstances that may upset this calculation, as, for instance, the adoption of a see-saw policy by the Labour Party; but the calculation is useful to show that after all there is no very great majority for the Protectionist Party, and there is one other factor of importance. A number of candidates have been returned as protectionists who may rely on the Government bringing in a revenue tariff of 15 per cent., such as Sir William Lyne actually foreshadowed. In that case any attempt at 25 per cent. or 30 per cent., such as Sir George Turner has indicated, would fare badly. Mr. Barton has now a chance of confining the scope of his proposed tariff to strictly revenue purposes, leaving it to give some moderate protection as an incident of our financial necessities. I think the Senate election has demonstrated to everybody that it will be necessary to establish some sort of deposit to prevent men from using the publicity of their candidature as a personal or business advertisement. I should refuse to join in establishing such a practice if I thought that it would keep out of political life any capable candidate by reason of his want of means; but it must be quite evident that the sense of perspective considerably varies in men of political ambition, and that many mistake 'the good-natured flattery of a large circle of intimate friends for a widespread reputation, and thus add to the expense and complications of an election without even the most remote chance of success. A reasonable deposit would compel more careful consideration, and if it did not act as a check the forfeited deposits would at least contribute to the election expenses, which fall upon the whole people. The selecting exactly six candidates out of a list of 50 is not as simple a matter as it at first seems, and I know of one case in which 57 voting papers were spoiled at one polling place out of a little more than 200. A noticeable feature in regard to the election was the variety of forms of personal and political advertisement resorted to by Senate candidates. It is a matter for congratulation that they did not prove successful in any case, and that the country was thereby saved the reputation of so undesirable a standard of political fitness. The quiet, undemonstrative manner in which the whole of the elections were conducted, and the perfection of the means adopted everywhere for informing the public of the results, are most creditable to our community."

MR. E. W. O'SULLIVAN'S OPINION.

The Minister for Works, Mr. E. W. O'Sullivan, when asked by a representative of the "Herald" for his views on the results of the elections, said:—

"The returns from the other States are far more favourable to the Bartonites than the Deakites. A protectionist in Tasmania heads the poll for the Senate, and the majority elected in that island are for Mr. Barton, though some may call themselves freetraders. Victoria has gone overwhelmingly for the Federal Government, and Queensland has given them a fair support. In South Australia there is also a majority for Mr. Barton, and Western Australia cannot be found to be hostile. All who call themselves freetraders in Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania, and Western Australia are not opposed to the Barton Administration. The labour candidates who have been chosen will also be more likely to support the new Federal Government than to oppose it. That Ministry promises something with regard to the admission of coloured labour in Queensland, while Mr. Reid has merely trifled with the question.

"On the whole, the prospects for the success of the Barton Ministry are good, and it will be their own fault if, after the settlement of the fiscal matter—upon which they have a majority—they do not continue to rule Australia. Should they wander from the lines of democratic thought, or grow careless upon the interests upon which the people are aroused, they may look for a defeat before the Federal Parliament has run its course. It should be the duty of the men on 'the look-out' of that Administration to see that mistakes of this kind are not made.

"Without including Western Australia, the returns for which are not complete, the Barton Ministry have the following supporters—38 in the Lower House and 15 in the Senate. It is probable that the final returns for Victoria may increase the protectionists there by two more. The Tasmanian returns are still subject to the count under the Hare system, and may vary in one or two cases."

MR. DUGALD THOMSON'S VIEWS.

Seen by a reporter of the "Herald" yesterday Mr. Dugald Thomson, the successful candidate for the representation of North Sydney in the Federal Parliament, gave his views on the results of the polling. He said that in spite of some disappointment, notably the loss of Mr. Ashton's able services in the House of Representatives, freetraders had reason to be gratified with the results of the elections so far as those results could at present be gauged. Before the elections there was a hope—possibly a sanguine one—that a majority might be secured both in the House of Representatives and the Senate, but there was a stronger hope—indeed an expectation—that a powerful freetrade minority would be obtained in the House of Representatives and some majority in the Senate. That expectation seemed to have been realised, and the realisation should prevent the imposition of any tariff which would rivet a protective policy on the country by the creation of powerful vested interests. Although the incompleteness of the returns prevented a precise estimate of results, and it could only be ascertained when Parliament met whether members answered on the fiscal question to press definitions, there seemed every reason to anticipate a freetrade majority in the Senate, and the Ministry must frame its policy with that fact in view. Although there might be a protectionist majority of 10 or 12 in the House of Representatives, that majority came entirely from the solid protectionist vote in Victoria, and it was satisfactory to find that in the remainder of the Commonwealth there was a freetrade majority. That fact promised well for the future of the freetrade policy. He thought it gratifying to notice that the electors of New South Wales by polling a high percentage of votes on the roll had shown their appreciation of their responsibilities and of the importance of the occasion.

THE FEDERAL PREMIER AT CLONTARF.

REMARKS ON THE SITUATION.

Mr. Barton and Mr. R. E. O'Connor, two members of the Federal Ministry, attended, with Mr. B. R. Wise (the Attorney-General of New South Wales), a picnic given by the Irish Rifles to Colonel Murray at Clontarf on Saturday. Opportunity was taken to deliver a few speeches during the afternoon, and political topics were touched upon.

Mr. Barton, who responded for the toast of "The Commonwealth," said the public would find that the federal elections would result in the Government of Australia being settled for some time, for the returns so far went to show that the Ministry would have a substantial majority such as would enable it to carry out its programme. The majority which the Government had reason to expect would be equivalent to a majority of 120 in the British House of Commons. (Cheers.) Such a majority, he thought, would be good enough to go on with. (Laughter.) The Government would seek to introduce a settled policy, to which existing industrial conditions would easily be able to accommodate themselves. (Hear, hear.) He would have liked to have seen two or three more women win for the Government in the State of New South Wales, but his disappointment in that respect would be compensated for by the support which he had reason to expect from Australia as a whole. It was a pity that the New South Wales public had not shown proper appreciation of the merits of some of the best men who had been candidates for the Senate. Still it was a consolation to find that if the best men were not at the top of the poll, the dross was at any rate about against the worst. (Great applause.) The Federal Ministry had done a great deal of hard work. Its labours would be intensified as time went on until the Federal Parliament was opened. The Government in the measures it would introduce would endeavour to do justice to all the States. If its measures were not agreeable to the Opposition he hoped the political warfare between the Government and the Opposition in the future would not be characterised by the unfair and undignified tactics of portion of the press during the late election.

Mr. R. E. O'Connor also responded. He said that the result of the polling for Canobias was a calamity not only to New South Wales but to all Australia. He hoped that before long some other electorate would return Mr. B. R. Wise, and thus obliterate the disgrace of his rejection. Speaking generally, the results of the federal elections had been that the Government was given a crushing majority. At a very early period the Government would be able to inaugurate a national policy which would give security to finance, industry, and commerce. (Cheers.)

Mr. B. R. Wise, in responding for the toast of "The New South Wales Parliament," said that at present Ministers of the State were much in the position of men who would before Mr. Justice Simpson to divorce their wives. They were waiting for the successors of those wives. Although naturally disappointed at the result of the Canobias contest he had a clear conscience through having acted loyally and consistently in a great cause. (Cheers.)

THE NEWCASTLE ELECTORATE.

ADDRESS BY MR. WATKINS.

NEWCASTLE, Sunday.

Mr. David Watkins, the successful labour protectionist candidate for the representation of the electorate of Newcastle in the Federal House of Representatives, delivered a brief address to the electors from the balcony of the Criterion Hotel last night. Mr. Woodward, president of the Northern district assembly of the Political Labour League, presided, and a gathering of fully 5000 persons assembled.

The chairman, in opening the proceedings, congratulated Mr. Watkins, on behalf of the labour leagues of the north, upon his return by an overwhelming majority.

Mr. Watkins, who upon coming forward was cheered and re-cheered, returned his thanks to the workers for their loyalty and to other sections of the community which had supported him. All the support which he had received had been voluntarily given. (Cheers.) The fact that an absolute majority of votes on the roll had been recorded in his favour was very gratifying to him. (Cheers.) He was also proud of the fact that he had received a larger number of votes than any other candidate for the House of Representatives in the State of New South Wales. (Renewed cheers.) It was with deep regret that he had learned of the defeat of the two labour candidates for the Senate. The system of voting for Senators was a disgrace to New South Wales, and as a result there was a very large percentage of informal votes. The difficulty had been anticipated by the State Legislative Assembly, but the Upper House had rejected a proposal the object of which was to overcome the difficulty. Had the electors been permitted to vote for Senators by placing a cross against their names the number of informal votes would have been comparatively few. Now that the battle was over he recognised that it was his duty to represent the whole of the electors of that vast constituency, and to the best of his ability he would watch the interests of people of the whole of Australia. (Cheers.) He regretted that, owing to indisposition, he was unable to address them at length on that occasion, but he would take the earliest opportunity of again meeting them. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. A. H. Griffith, M.L.A., who was well received, said that the electors had half-marked Newcastle as a labour seat. (Cheers.)

Addresses were also delivered by Messrs. A. Box, secretary of the political labour party, R. Wells, and O. G. Steel. Mr. H. Evans, who said he was a protectionist, and not connected with labour leagues in any way, also congratulated Mr. Watkins on his triumphant return. Mr. Watkins, a brother of the successful candidate, sang "Sons of Australia" and "When the Empire Calls," and the demonstration was brought to a close with cheers for Mr. David Watkins, for labour, and for the King.

POSTING THE RESULTS AT NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE, Sunday.

Perhaps nowhere in the State was deeper interest manifested in the progress of the elections for the House of Representatives and for the Senate than in the city of Newcastle. Almost the entire population of the numerous outlying mining townships visited the city both on Friday and Saturday evenings to gather the latest information. The voting for the whole of the candidates for both houses was posted at frequent intervals outside the branch office of the "Sydney Morning Herald" and "Sydney Mail" in Scott-street, and dense crowds gathered for four or five hours each evening watching the progress of the campaign. The branch office was brilliantly illuminated by huge gas devices specially erected for the occasion by the City of Newcastle Gas Company, and the display boards were sufficiently large to enable the results to be distinctly read at a considerable distance. The crowds extended the full width of the roadway, and during the height of the excitement some amount of difficulty was experienced in conducting the tramway traffic. The latest voting returns were communicated at intervals of every few minutes from the head office of the "Sydney Morning Herald" by means of the Sydney-Newcastle long-distance telephone, and in this way the results were received much more rapidly than would have been possible by means of the telegraph lines. The head office and the Newcastle branch office of the "Sydney Morning Herald" were connected direct by telephone, so that the ever-varying results were posted almost simultaneously with Sydney. The residents of Newcastle, 100 miles distant, were thus placed on an equal footing with the people of the metropolis, and the complete arrangements made were much appreciated.

THE POLLING IN QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Sunday.

The elections were not attended by special excitement, less perhaps than ordinary State contests. In no case were there strong manifestations of party spirit. The polling results for the Senate are in the nature of a very considerable surprise to the public generally, but not to those who weigh the solidity ticket of the labour party against the multiplication of candidates and the cross tickets of those representing the other side in State politics. The organised labour ticket was Messrs. Higgs, Dawson, and Stewart, for whom supporters were advised to plump; but Mr. Glassey's long service in the labour cause led to his inclusion in the vote by the great majority of labour supporters, otherwise the labour ticket was closely adopted. A proof of the effect of the cross ticket was clearly shown in Mr. Ferguson's case. He is on all the tickets except the labour. An analysis of the fiscal views of the leading seven are thus:—The four labour candidates support the Barton tariff. There are two protectionists, and one is undeclared. On the continuance of kanaka labour two are for it, and five are against it. The fiscal issue was not made a leading feature of the election, except by the National Protection Association, which worked hard for the protectionist ticket, including Mr. Higgs.

The elections for the House of Representatives so far show that five labour candidates are probably returned, and four of the usual Ministerial supporters. Mr. Macdonald Paterson's return for Brisbane was settled by a large contingent vote from Mr. Buzacott's supporters. The labour vote in this election was about 1700 less than the other candidates received. Mr. Edwards's return for Oxley is beyond doubt. Contrary to expectation, he scored well in South Brisbane and Woolloongabba. Mr. Paterson, too, leads Mr. Nelson on the votes of the populous parts of Capricornia. An analysis of the fiscal views shows three freetrade, three protection, one labour protectionist, one labour undeclared, four in favour of the continuance of kanaka labour, five opposed to it.

An analysis of the territorial position of the seven leading candidates for the Senate is thus:—Southern, Messrs. Higgs, Drake, Glassey, Thynne; central, Messrs. Stewart and Ferguson; north, Mr. Dawson.

THE OUTLOOK IN QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Sunday.

In all electorates for representatives the returns yet to come are not likely to affect the position of the candidates except in Herbert and Maranoa. For the Senate the following are the leading seven, and the first three are certain, while Messrs. Stewart and Ferguson are most likely to be amongst the six required, while final returns may result either in Mr. Glassey or Mr. Thynne being elected:—Higgs, Dawson, Drake, Stewart, Ferguson, Glassey, Thynne.

THE RESULTS IN VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Sunday.

The results of the elections for the House of Representatives are somewhat disappointing to the low tariff party, the figures so far being 19 high tariff and four low tariff. Mr. Mauifold, returned for Corangamite, was at first classified as low tariff, but he is now classified as high tariff. In some of the constituencies where a fair fight on the fiscal issue was anticipated the personal equation dominated, and in others religious feeling swayed the result. Although the returns are not yet complete for the Senate, the numbers, as at present appearance, indicate the return of three low and three high tariffists. The returns have been greatly delayed by storms in the country.

THE SOUTH AUSTRALIAN ELECTIONS.

ADELAIDE, Sunday.

The federal elections in South Australia on Saturday set the seal on her union with the other States of the Commonwealth. The elections in the State have always evoked considerable enthusiasm and excitement, but on Saturday the contest was devoid of much of the stir and party feeling which prevails during campaigns for seats in the State Parliament. A few weeks it seemed as if there could not possibly be any interest in the question. In all sides the subject of the election was looked upon with depressing indifference, and the apathy of electors threatened to be a serious matter, but of recent weeks a change had come. Education by the press, and the visits of candidates to the chief centres of population combined with some active canvassing, aroused interest if they did not arouse enthusiasm. The result was that while the poll was not so large as the importance of the subject warranted, still the percentage of those who registered their votes compared with the number on the roll was fair. The absence of the fiery party element was abundantly manifest. Everything was quiet, and though it was so the election was one of the most business-like known. The system of continuous adopted enabled the polling to check the number of plumpers, but the papers which were returned with fewer votes than the full number were extremely numerous. The non-protectionist party has great cause for hopefulness. Out of the seven now holding fast are non-protectionists, three of whom seem to be sure to be elected, and in the Senate three out of the six are classed as being against high duties, all of whom appear likely to be in the final six. In reference to the House of Representatives, it seems as certain as anything electoral can be that Mr. Kingston, Sir L. Bonython, Mr. Houlder, Mr. Glynn, Mr. Batchelor, and Mr. Solomon will be elected. The seventh seat is very open. Mr. Poynton occupies that position at present, and he is doing well in the country, but the town votes yet to come may alter it. Mr. Price figures materially, and even Mr. Caldwell has a strong outside chance. The only two districts finished are East and West Adelaide. For the Senate there are about 35,000 papers still to be counted, and any position is liable to alter very considerably. Sir J. Symon, Sir R. J. Baker, Mr. Playford, and Sir J. Downer may be regarded as future senators. Mr. O'Gregor is fifth, and Mr. Charleston sixth. Mr. Kirkpatrick is not far behind, but the eighth man, Mr. O'Loghlin, is nearly 2000 away.

THE WESTERN AUSTRALIAN MEMBERS.

A MESSAGE TO MR. REID.

Mr. G. H. Reid, the leader of the freetrade party, received a telegram on Saturday from Mr. Wilson, president of the Freetrade and Liberal Association in Western Australia, as follows:—"We are sending 10 freetraders to the Federal Parliament. Sir John Forrest is the only protectionist. Trust you will have a majority in all other States."

THE POLLING IN TASMANIA.

FREETRADE MAJORITY.

HOBART Sunday.

The election returns show:—

For the Senate, four freetraders and one moderate protectionist returned.

For the House of Representatives, four freetraders and one protectionist returned.

The West Coast has returned one pronounced protectionist for each House. This is due to the strong Victorian mining element.

The returns in connection with the federal elections have not all reached the returning officer. The Launceston returns are to hand, and the majority of papers from Lyell and Zeehan also, but altogether only about half the ballot papers have been received by the returning officer. The balance should be to hand on Tuesday evening, or early on Wednesday morning. The precise quota will probably be made known on Wednesday. The Hare-Clarke system is apparently accountable in some measure for the delay in the completion of returns, it being new to the country deputies and their subordinates.

THE POLLING IN THE COUNTRY.

MR. SYDNEY SMITH AT BATHURST.

BATHURST, Saturday.

Mr. Sydney Smith, member for Macquarie in the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth Parliament, was accorded a great demonstration last night. A procession, headed by a band, marched through the town and halted at the Grand Hotel, where speeches were delivered by Mr. W. H. Webb (chairman), Mr. Sydney Smith, and Dr. Horst. The proceedings were very enthusiastic. About 3000 people were present.

THE RIVERINA CONTEST.

HAY, Sunday.

An analysis of the figures show that Mr. Chanter's majority in the Riverina was obtained in the Murray and Deniliquin electorates, both of which are right on the border, the latter being Mr. Chanter's electorate. In the Wentworth electorate, which is also on the Murray, but extends far back, the voting was about even. In Hay, Mr. Ashton's former electorate, and in the Lachlan electorate Mr. Ashton had a majority. Throughout the election the contest has been made as between Mr. Barton and Mr. Reid, and Mr. Barton's great popularity by reason of his federal services was a strong point with the electors who were almost unanimous in favour of the bill on each referendum. Mr. Chanter was announced as the Bartonite candidate, and his election is due to the desire of the Riverina people to strengthen Mr. Barton's hands. There is also a very large Victorian element in the division, which is strongly anti-Reid. Apart from Mr. Barton's influence and Victorian sentiment, the division is largely protectionist as shown by the fact that it returns four protectionists and one freetrader to the State Parliament.

THE MEMBER FOR CANOBLAS.

ORANGE, Sunday.

Mr. Thomas Brown, the newly elected member for Canobias, passed through to Sydney last night. He was met at the railway station by a large number of his supporters, who warmly congratulated him. Mr. Brown returned thanks from the balcony of Wright's Hotel.

THE WERRIWA CONTEST.

GOULBURN, Saturday.

Freetraders are jubilant at the result of the election here. Mr. Conroy entered the field very late. His opponent had standing given him through his being the State member. A rough declaration of the poll was made to-day. Both candidates addressed a large crowd. Mr. Conroy said the victory was one for principle. A movement is on foot to present Mr. Rose with a testimonial of shilling subscriptions to recoup him to a certain extent for the heavy outlay which he has incurred, and for the purpose of proving that public confidence still remains with him as the representative in the State Parliament.

BLACKHEATH, Saturday.

The polling was steadily proceeded with yesterday for Parramatta electorate, the bulk of the electors having recorded their votes before noon. For the House of Representatives there was only one informal vote, but for the Senate there were 15, as confusion existed owing to the 44 names having to be struck out. In the evening great excitement prevailed as the results were posted on one of the large windows of a business place, especially when it was ascertained that Mr. Joseph Cook was practically elected.

LITHGOW, Saturday.

Polling passed very quietly here yesterday for the Parramatta electorate. Great excitement was manifested over the result last night, and Mr. Cook's supporters were enthusiastic over his victory. The informal votes for the Senate here exceeded 20 per cent. The freetrade bunch for the Senate was strongly supported, Mr. Millen heading the poll among the candidates.

MUSWELLBROOK, Sunday.

The election for the Senate represented here passed off very quietly in Muswellbrook, where the ballot papers proved confusing to some of the electors, 59 informal votes being recorded at the local polling booth. The candidates chosen for the Senate here were:—Mr. R. E. O'Connor, who headed the poll in the Muswellbrook division by a large number of votes, for William Manning, Colonel M'Kay, Mr. John Kidd, Mr. A. J. Gould, and Mr. J. T. Walker.

SUTHERLAND, Saturday.

Polling day passed off very quietly. It is estimated that about 50 voters from National Park and Port Hacking did not use the franchise, there being no polling booth nearer than Helensburgh, and voters declined to travel there at a cost of 3s each.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WENTWORTH ELECTORATE.

The interest taken by the electors throughout the Wentworth Electorate during polling day was very keen. The polling throughout the day was very heavy; in fact, the heaviest on record. An excitement was also apparent, more so towards the hour of the closing of the poll approached. No particular incidents were to be recorded during the voting.

As soon as 6 p.m. arrived the scrutiny began, and the various officials were kept busy. The votes were counted at each of the 18 polling places, and upon completion the officer in charge at once telegraphed the totals to Mr. Critchett Walker, at the G.P.O., Sydney. The ballot boxes with the papers were then taken to the chief polling place for the electorate (Paddington Town Hall), where a large and enthusiastic crowd had gathered to hear the results. They were, however, disappointed, from the fact that the returning officer (Alderman T. George) decided to have the whole of the votes for both the House of Representatives and the Senate counted before making the figures known. Both Sir William M'Millan and Mr. Gannon were present most of the evening for the purpose of addressing the electors at the declaration of the poll, but owing to the delay in carrying out the work they had to leave before the scrutiny was completed. Towards early night the boxes began to arrive more rapidly, and at 12.30 a.m. there still remained three returns to come in.

POSITION OF PARTIES.

The following list of candidates elected or leading shows the position of parties in both Houses, as disclosed by the results of the polling so far as they have been received. In a few instances the results of the polling for the House of Representatives are likely to be altered. The Senate returns in all the colonies are incomplete, and leading candidates only are given:—

IMPERIAL DRAFT CONTINGENT.

In general orders issued on Saturday it was notified that members of the Imperial Draft Contingent would leave on Saturday next, in lieu of Wednesday, as previously announced. Matters were somewhat quiet at camp during Saturday. Beyond a brief exercise in mounted drill in the morning, only ordinary routine duties were performed. On Sunday, after a church, a balking parade of horses took place at Cooges. In the afternoon, both on Saturday and Sunday, there was a good attendance of the public at the camp. Major-General French, C.B., C.B. (officer commanding the New South Wales military forces), will make an inspection of the contingent at 10 a.m. to-day.

SPECIAL CABLES.

FROM THE "HERALD'S" LONDON CORRESPONDENTS.

THE LATE QUEEN VICTORIA.

LONDON, March 29.

Nearly every large borough in the United Kingdom is raising a local memorial to Queen Victoria, besides participating in the national memorial.

COREA.

A PLOT THAT FAILED.

LONDON, March 30.

The "Novoe Vremya" the St. Petersburg journal, reports that the Minister for Justice of Corea and the Minister for the Interior have been banished for engaging in a conspiracy. The Ministers intended to destroy with dynamite the residence of the Russian Minister at Seoul, and provoke the advent of foreign troops in order to protect the fresh Ministry. The plot failed owing to the discord among the conspiring Ministers.

Advices from Yokohama state that three officers of the Japanese Headquarters' Staff are going to Seoul to investigate matters.

The Russian Minister at Seoul is M. Pavloff, who some years ago, while acting as Minister at Peking, conducted the negotiations which led to the cession of Port Arthur and Talienwan to Russia.

* Where dividends are interim the yield is based on per's distribution; otherwise on the last half-yearly one.

A fairly good amount of business was done this week, and when the elections are over may perhaps be expected to be freer from disturbing influences. Money is still abundant and cheap. Bank deposit and discount rates are quoted as follows:—For deposits: For 12 months, 3 per cent.; six months, 1½ per cent. Discount rates are: For three months' bills, 5 to 5½ per cent.; four months' bills, 5½ to 6½ per cent.; overdrafts, 6 to 7 per cent.

The following table shows the Bank of England figures, quotations for Consols and New South Wales 3 per cents, and money market rates and prices of the principal Australian commodities in comparison with the figures for the years 1899 and 1900:—

The decrease for the month will be accounted for by the holiday.

The New South Wales revenue for the month of February amounts to £875,412, showing an apparent decrease of £5697, but there would be an increase if a certain portion of it had not been charged with expenditure of the Commonwealth. The revenue for the quarter aggregated £2,735,539, an increase of £134,106, and for the nine months £7,840,466, an increase of £475,325; the increases in the quarter and nine months would have been £242,475 and £583,694 respectively, but for the charge of £108,368 for expenditure by the Commonwealth.

The usual half-yearly dividend in the Equitable Permanent Benefit Building Society is announced by advertisement.

The "Journal of the Institute of Bankers of New South Wales" for March has among its contents a report of the annual meeting of the institute, and of the address of Mr. T. A. Dibbs, the president, beside other matter of interest to bankers.

Richardson and Wrench, Limited, will on Monday hold their sale of properties postponed from yesterday.

IMPORT MARKET.

Opening fairly well, trade slackened down as the past week drew to a close, the federal elections having a disquieting effect. Merchants anticipate, however, that as soon as some distinct idea can be gained as to the state of the parties there will be a renewal of speculative activity, which will continue right up to the day when the uniform tariff is imposed. Many articles are regarded as likely to become dutiable no matter which fiscal system becomes the settled policy of the Government, and goods answering to this description, among which may be instanced tea, tobacco, and tapioca, starch, tinned fish, and others, have been exceedingly well held for firm rates. By some oils are considered likely to come under the same category. These holding these ideas base them on a close study of the financial position. They assert that no treasurer, no matter what his views on the fiscal question may be, can afford to do without the revenue derivable from such prolific revenue producers as the articles enumerated and some other goods of a kindred nature. Whether this idea is well founded or not, heavy speculation has been based thereon.

Our cable foreign quotes Blundell, Spence, and Co.'s double boiled linseed oil at 2s 4½d, a rise of 2d per gallon as compared with the price ruling on February 22, the date of their last circular to hand by mail.

The Orakuri Shale Oil Works (New Zealand) have, according to our Wellington correspondent, commenced operations, and are expected to turn out 2000 gallons of kerosene daily. The consumption of oil in New Zealand rather exceeds 4000 gallons per day.

The customs revenue received at Sydney to-day amounted to £3822. The principal items were:—

Spirits, £563; wine, £431; ale, porter, and beer, £202; tobacco, cigars, and cigarettes, £1172; tea, £43; dried and candied fruits, £27; harbour and light rates, £49; plotage, £40; excise on tobacco, cigars, and cigarettes, £1072. Total, £3822.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

Business in mining ventures in the Stock Exchange on Saturday was very quiet. Only two sales were reported, and quotations were without material alteration.

The elections and the consequent public holiday on Friday interrupted the course of business during last week. The result, with a market already depressed, was a small list of sales. With the exception of a demand for Woodlark Island on Wednesday and Thursday, business disclosed no special feature. The contributing shares in this undertaking sold freely at prices varying slightly between 4s 10d and 5s 1d. The last sale was at 4s 11d. Two parcels of paid-up shares sold at 11s 6d and 11s 3d. New South Wales gold mines had little attention, the list of sales being:—Mount Dryadale, 19s; Occidental, 14s 6d; Peak Hill Proprietary, paid, 1s 3d. Dredging ventures were not in good demand. Sales were as follows:—Associated, contributing, 3s 8d, 3s 9d; Sambalombene, 11s 3d, 11s 6d; Little River, 2s; Macquaris No. 2, 6s 9d; Federal Centrifugal, 5s, 5s 1d; Owen's Valley, paid, 10s. In Western Australian gold mines, Great Boulder Main Reef was sold in fair numbers at 23s, 22s 9d, 23s, 22s 11d, and 23s 3d. Other sales under this head were:—Brown Hill Central, 2s 5d; Associated Northern Blocks, 47s 6d; Associated Gold Mines, 49s, 48s 6d; Kalgurli Gold Corporation, 60s; South Kalgurli, 44s 3d; Croesus Proprietary, 1s; Boulder Main Reef, 38s 3d. THE HAWAIIAN ISLES BARQUE.

SAFE ARRIVAL AT NEWCASTLE.

SENSATIONAL EXPERIENCES.

NEWCASTLE, Sunday.

The American four-masted barque Hawaiian Isles, Captain Rice, grave fears for the safety of which were entertained since the receipt of the news of the supposed loss of the steamship Federal, arrived safely in this port at 8.35 this morning, after a sensational passage of 10 days from Melbourne. The Hawaiian Isles left Melbourne for Newcastle at 5 o'clock on the morning of the 21st instant, and shortly after leaving port she encountered a violent hurricane. The vessel was about 12 miles out at the time, and her position was about 35 miles west of Wilson's Promontory. There were no indications of the approach of the tempest, which appears to have been one of the most sudden and violent ever experienced on the Australian coast. The weather became so dense that it was impossible to discern an object a few yards away, and a terrible sea was running. The entire set of sails of the Hawaiian Isles was blown into ribbons and carried away, and the vessel was absolutely at the mercy of the seas, but beyond the loss of her sails, she escaped serious damage. A tidal wave or waterspout reaching to an estimated height of over 50ft. was witnessed, but fortunately the barque was a safe distance away and did not feel its effects. The hurricane continued to rage with unabated fury throughout the night, and the vessel lay to until daybreak, drifting helplessly all the time. The velocity of the wind was estimated at fully 90 miles an hour, and the officers and crew all described the gale as the most violent ever experienced during their seafaring lives. Observations were taken as early as possible after the appearance of daylight, and the position of the ship was then ascertained to be within four miles of the north-east of Curtis Island. The hurricane did not moderate until early on the morning of Saturday week last, when the vessel was distant about 50 miles from Cape Howe. The Hawaiian Isles was off Port Jackson on Sunday last, the South Head light being distinctly visible. Contrary winds were then met with until Friday last, and Nobbys was sighted last night. The vessel stood off the land until daylight and entered port this morning. Captain M'Laughlin, a pilot, who made the journey from Melbourne to Newcast
